

Irish Company Purchases a Virtual Moon in Entropia Universe, an MMO with a Real Cash Economy.

VirtualseNSE Limited invests $94,338.40 US dollars in a Virtual Moon called Monria.

Dublin, Ireland (PRWEB) January 04, 2016 -- VirtualseNSE Ltd, a real business, operating in a virtual world, announced today their largest investment transaction to date with the purchase of a Moon named Monria on Nov. 26, 2015 for $94,338.40 US dollars within Entropia Universe, a Real Cash Economy MMO whose virtual reality platform was developed by Mindark PE AB located in Gothenburg, Sweden.

“My interest in Video Games started with a Commodore Vic-20 computer as a child,” says Jason Jarvis, the driving force behind VirtualseNSE and his virtual avatar named Eugenio Anhithe Wilde. Jason shares, “This passion grew into a business venture when I discovered Entropia Universe and opened a chain of virtual in-game stores. Operating a successful virtual business allowed me to expand, and I diversified into transportation and land management. It was around this time that VirtualseNSE was formed in 2009.”

Jason states that revenue from the VirtualseNSE investments “has been used as a vehicle to fund his startups, invest in emerging technology and provide consultation to tech companies.” He further shares that his “main aim is to help the evolution of the Metaverse by encouraging and supporting its economic development.”

The moon estate has its own Lunar Command Center, two Lunar apartment towers, and subsurface caverns filled with unique creatures and rare resources for hunters and miners. There are player-owned shops available at various locations where items and goods are sold to other participants for use in professions such as crafting, or other interactive game experiences.

Jason’s vision for Monria is to create a community-centric environment where the Monria Team and participants work in partnership toward building a sustainable economy, and elevating the Monria virtual experience to a greater degree of participant satisfaction. Players who make positive contributions and are dedicated to the future success of Monria will benefit themselves and the community.

A technology leader with over 20 years of experience, Jason says that “Monria is a long-term acquisition,” and it is the company’s intention to develop and market this virtual lunar real estate for years to come.
